CLIPPINGS OF INFORMATION

An Oklahoma editor tells of an old Indian that came to his office to subscribe for his paper. The editor took the Indian's money then the Indian wanted a receipt. The editor tried to talk him out of it, but Mr. Indian wanted a receipt. After making it out the editor asked him why he was so persistent in wanting a receipt. He said, "ma, die some time. Go to gate and St. Peter ask if I been good Indian. I say, 'yes.' He say, 'did you pay your debts?' I say, 'yes.' He say, 'did you pay editor of Chieftain for paper?' I say, 'yes.' He say, 'where is receipt?' I don't have it. I have to run all over hell to find you and get receipt."

Beginning with this spring all growers wish to sell seeds under the auspices of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment association must treat their grains for smut every three or four years. Those who wish to have their names in the association's pure-bred seed list next year must treat their grains for smut this spring.

A herd of high grade Guernseys, that probably cannot be duplicated in the state are kept on the Tilden farms south of Delevan. The herd consists of 220 head of cattle, 150 of them producing certified milk. There are about 80 calves on the farm at this time of the year, ranging from two weeks to six months of age.

Mathew Kelley, of Lake Geneva is under bond of $1,000 and faces the charge of having written a letter demanding that a certain sum of money be deposited at a given point on the Elkhorn road, otherwise a large ice house belonging to Kelly & Russell would be burned to the ground. Postmaster Brown of Lake Geneva, swore out the warrant and Uncle Sam will see the case through.

The annual meeting of the Union Grove Telephone company was held last week. J. T. Clitzings was re-elected a member of the board of directors for three years and a dividend of 12 per cent was given the stockholders.

It is said that Paris green usually sells for about 20 to 22 cents per pound and this year it will be all the way from 50 to 90 cents per pound, and may be hard to get at these prices.

The Lake Geneva council has passed an ordinance voting $28,000 bonds for a city hall. The issue will be voted on at the spring election.

Fourteen head of registered Holsteins sold by Harry Dunbar at auction at Elkhorn last week brought an average of $246.43 a head. One cow brought $700.

Thought.

Thinking cannot be clear, till it has had expression. We must write, or speak, or act our thoughts, or they will remain in a half torpid form. Our feelings must have expression, or they will be as clouds, which, till they descend in rain, will never bring up fruit or flower. So it is with all the inward feeling; expression gives them development. Thought is the blossom; language the opening bud; action the fruit behind it.—H. W. Boecher.

BORDEN COMPANY ISSUES SUMMER PRICES

Wednesday the Borden Condensed Milk Co., opened its books at the local factory for semi-annual contracts covering the coming six months. Practically all the old patrons and a great many new ones signed and seemed to be satisfied with the prices offered for summer milk.

The Milk Producers' association demand of $1.55 a hundred pounds for milk testing 3.5 per cent in butter fat was met with scales varying from that of the Borden company, 21 5-6 cents under the demand, to that of the Jelke company, 8 5-6 cents under the demand.

Milk association officers have declared that farmers were holding out all over the district and that nine Borden plants had not more than 20 contracts all told.

The Borden company, first in the field with prices, offered exactly the same scale as last year, on average of $1.33 1-6 for 3.5 per cent milk and $1.36 1-6 for 3.6 per cent milk.

The Bowman Dairy company which competes with the Borden company throughout this territory, announced shortly afterwards that it would pay $1.45 5-6 for 3.6 milk, the same as the premium price last year on 3.6 and 3.7 milk.

All prices are on a sliding scale calling for the addition or subtraction of three cents for each tenth of one per cent over or below the butter fat basis on which the price is based.—Richmond Gazette.

NOTE THREATENS ORPET AND JUDGE

A letter threatening Judge C. C. Edwards of Waukegan was made public by him Monday after he had granted a change of venue to Wm. Orpet, indicted for the murder of Marion Lambert. Judge Charles H. Donnelly of Woodstock may hear the case.

The letter which was dated "At Chicago, March 14," was mailed in Galena. It reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. Edwards—The entire district is very much put out at the 'first' decision 'for the defense' you have taken in Lambert-Orpet case and have all decided that you are 'wrong' in taking his part as you do show yourself. 'He, Willie Orpet, is guilty of murder in first degree without doubt and must suffer as he had his sweetheart do. If you are the cause of 'Will' being free without punishment, our only hope is that if you have a daughter, she will befall to the same end as that of poor Miss Lambert."

"If you free 'Will' he will never live to do another girl injustice, for he is guilty just as sure as your name is Edwards. Marion Lambert's parents may be poor, but that is no sign Orpet should be turned free."

"If you free him by not letting him stand trial you will never have but a few more chances yourself, for we will get you too. You may laugh now—but you won't."

"Yours in warning,

The letter has been turned over to the postal authorities.

"GINGLES JINGLES"

DISCOURAGEMENTS.

Get the right attitude and get on the right track. It's the thing that you lack. If you're out for a joy ride and don't give a cuss, you had better change wagons, you're on the wrong bus. For you can't go the limit in pleasures unless you're on the job with the hard-working guys. And for you to start slipping will give you the blues, then discouragement comes and you're flated to lose. So get wise in the start and live ample and plain. There is nothing you'll miss, but there's much you will gain. Your discouragements always are backed by a cause, for they show you are shy on obeying the laws. And the mode of discouragement stand in your way. You can never succeed and permit them to stay. It is all up to you and it's in your own hands. You should think it all over and make your demands. And then simply stand pat when you put in the claim, and your wants will come over if you're only game. Your discouragements beat it if given a chance. So just chain the blue devils and on with the Limin' Gingles dance.

RESULT OF ANTIOCH TOWN NOMINATIONS

At the caucus last Saturday a total of 275 votes were cast, 213 by the men and 41 by the women. For the offices of town clerk, collector and commissioner of highways, there was opposition and on these the fight was centered. The vote counted up as follows:

	Men	Women	Total
For Town Clerk
C. F. Rickards	136	23	159
Walter Chinn	91	15	106
For Assessor
Chas. Van Patten	172	15	187
For Collector
W. T. Taylor	142	22	162
Frank Harden	80	10	90
For Commissioner of Highway
Frank Dunn	120	19	139
Fred Brown	99	14	113
For Committeemen
Frank Harden	170	12	182
Elmer Brook	171	12	183
Geo. White	151	13	164

Chinn has filed his petition, and will center his forces with the intention of defeating Rickards in the final race.

At Lake Villa there appeared to be no competition for office with the exception of that of collector for which there were two aspirants. Percy Dibble and John Cribb the former winning out in the race. However, at the last moment the name of John Bonner was brought up as a most likely candidate to defeat J. J. Barnstable for the office of supervisor and so concerted was the action that at the final count it was found that Barnstable with his name on the caucus ballot had received 26 votes while Bonner received 25 by "writing in."

The ticket as nominated stands. Supervisor—James Barnstable. Clerk—Alex Kapple. Assessor—Eugene Wilton. Collector—Percy Dibble. Commissioners of Highways—Frank Hamlin, Bert Galiger. Bonner has expressed his intention of running independent.

Invents a Hilarity Recorder.

An English moving picture man has invented an instrument for registering the hilarity caused by comic films. It is called the acougraph and is employed in the halls where new movies are being tried on an audience for the first time. The proprietors of the film can then impress their customers or not, as the case may be, with the surprising result recorded.

SUPERVISOR JOHN STRATTON DIES AT HIS HOME THURSDAY LAST

By the death of John Stratton, of Fox Lake, which occurred Thursday afternoon of last week, Lake county is called upon to mourn the loss of one of its most prominent citizens.

The news of his death came as a shock to even his most intimate friends, as his illness covered a period of only a few days. He was in attendance at the last meeting of the board of Supervisors in his usual good health and spirits and spoke of his probable return to the board, and at that time little did any one surmise that he was there for the last time.

On the Sunday previous to his death he was taken ill, and the next day a case of pneumonia had developed, this coupled with erysiples, was more than he had the strength to combat, and on Thursday he passed away.

For more than half a century Mr. Stratton had been a resident of this county, having come here with his parents when they left England in 1857.

It was in Hampshire, England, that John Stratton was born, Sept. 1, 1846. His affiliations were all American and no more representative citizen than the deceased could have been found.

A hard worker, and thrifty, Mr. Stratton accumulated many of the rich acres of Lake county, and was reputed as one of the leading farmers in this section of the state. In addition to his private endeavors, he managed to devote much time to the public good. Besides being supervisor, he was school trustee and had previously served as treasurer for the school district in which he lived.

He was married to Mary O'Boyle, Nov. 14, 1872, who with these adult children, survive: Harry, Lake Villa; Supervisor Wm. Stratton and John of Ingelide; Mrs. Harriet Stanton, Ingelide.

The funeral was held at the home Sunday afternoon and was attended by a large cortege of friends, among whom were members of the board of supervisors, and several other prominent men from Waukegan. The remains were laid at rest in the Fox Lake cemetery.

The Rabbit Scored.

A cottager and his wife endeavored to capture a wild rabbit by holding a net along the end of their garden, which borders a deep canal. Making a final dash, the rabbit ran toward the woman and tripped her, causing her to overbalance and fall into the canal. Her husband dived to her rescue, and but for the timely assistance of two men both would have been drowned.—London Observer.

THE MACKS TAKE TWO GOOD GAMES

Last Thursday night the Macks handed the Grayslake bowling team a very neat 208 score trimming, which was a surprise to the Macks after the big defeat Little Joe's team received early in the season. The Macks were in fine condition that night and found Grayslake short handed, and having an off night which being caused by two of their bowlers missing. But to make it a square deal see what the Macks will get on the return game.

The Macks sure have horseshoe luck for they keep right on piling up big scores with winning games at a fast rate. The Lake Villa team were the Macks opponents on Monday night and were well matched for the occasion having high hopes of victory from the very start, which was shattered in the first game and was kept that way till the finish when the Macks stood 999 to the good.

THE LATEST IN AUTO TRUCKS IS SMITH FORM-A-TRUCK

The Antioch Packing company will soon be able to deliver meat orders from their plant with auto service.

They have figured with the H. & R. Garage to have them build a Ford truck with durable service and which they have brought to light one of the latest models, the chain drive Smith Form-A-Truck, which is attached to your every day Ford car (runabout or touring). In making the attachment of these chain drives, it is necessary to remove the body and two rear wheels, putting in place of wheels two small sprocket wheels which run back to the hard rubber tire wheels with another attached sprocket wheel.

They are built so as to carry 2000 lbs without any strain on the car, and making speed as high as twenty miles an hour, the chain drive cuts the speed of regular Fords down to one half. Every Ford owner knows what a Ford will do, when it comes to making hills, well, this Ford truck goes up a hill with a load on easier than a man can walk. Of course these are strong words, but to prove it just call around the H. & R. garage some day if you are from Missouri, and to say more, the truck with a common wagon box bolted to the frame was used last Thursday evening to convey the bowling team to Grayslake making a load of ten. The trip was made in fifty minutes, considering roads at that.

Be Careful What You Say

In speaking of a person's faults
Pray don't forget your own;
Remember, those with homes of glass
Should seldom throw a stone.
If we have nothing else to do
But talk of those who sin,
'Tis better we commence at home
And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man
Until he's fairly tried;
Should we not like his company,
We know the world is wide.
Some may have faults, and who has not?
The old as well as young;
Perhaps we may for aught we know
Have fifty to their one.

I'll tell you a better plan
And find it works full well
To try my own defects to cure
Before of others tell.
And these I sometimes hope to be
No more than some I know,
My own shortcomings bid me let
The faults of others go.

Then let us all when we commence
To slander friend or foe,
Think of the harm one word will do
To those who little know.
Remember, curses sometimes, like
Our chickens, "roost at home";
Don't speak of others' faults until
We have none of our own.

H. P. Fairman a Patient of the County Hospital Communicates With the News

IS GAINING HEALTH SLOWLY

Friend Johnson:
I noticed in this week's News a brief item with reference to the Lake County Hospital. Possibly a comment from one who has spent six months in the tuberculosis ward may be timely and not entirely out of place.

To the unthinking taxpayer the expense given will appear enormous. Again, the explanatory sentence with reference to the class of patients may also have a different meaning than intended.

With reference to the latter I will say that the citizens of Lake county should feel a personal pride in the institution. It is worthy of Lake county and really a requirement that every county should have.

With regard to patronage, that is a matter of individual opinion. It is a mistaken idea to think that cases of typhoid, pneumonia or other serious diseases, which require constant and painstaking care and observation can be cared for better at home. Ordinarily a mother, sister or other relatives or friends will ever do in their efforts to make a dear one comfortable. Trained nurses can be secured, of course, but in the ordinary home conveniences are not at hand which are available in a well appointed hospital.

Our citizens would be doing themselves as well as their afflicted relatives dependent upon them a favor to send them where regular treatment by competent, skilled nurses is to be had, and for a very reasonable amount.

It is my opinion, however, that Lake county's populace, is not generally informed as to this institution and are of the opinion that its primary purpose is to care for the indigent.

With reference to the expense, one should withhold their criticism until they have personally inspected the place and observed the working methods employed.

I have had ample opportunity to observe the methods employed in the ward or department where I am, in reality, quarantined, and will at some future time outline in detail the system in order that the readers of the News may become informed sufficiently to entertain no sentimental doubts about sending tuberculosis patients here for treatment.

My own case may interest some who know me. I came here with little hope, but with a determination to gain every possible advantage. My improvement has been slow, as we presumed it would be if at all. Throughout the six months I have been comfortably and painstakingly cared for and believe that before the summer is over will be rid of the plague. But setbacks may come and I am far from normal strength and weight. That I am alive I believe is due to the Mercy God and my coming here where every advantage to fight the disease is at my disposal.

Yours truly,
H. P. Fairman.

Waukegan, March 17.

Sensitive.

A polite young man called upon another young man, unfortunately not at that time at home. So the first young man left a note for the second young man, saying that he was "sorry to have found him out." The second young man in reply wrote the first young man a long and very pointed letter, in which he declared that he had always tried to do the best he could and had always meant to be fair to everybody.

Don't Put Oil Into the Ear.

In an address on diseases of the ear Dr. S. MacCuen Smith of Philadelphia gave an earnest warning against using blisters or poultices to relieve acute earache, as well as putting oil or anything else into the ear. Either may do irreparable damage.

THE HEART OF NIGHT WIND

A STORY OF THE GREAT NORTH WEST
By VINGIE E. ROE
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT BY DODD, MEAD AND COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Sletzt of Dally's lumber camp directs a stranger to the camp. Walter Sandry introduces himself to John Dally, foreman of the Dillingworth Lumber Co., and most of it. He makes acquaintance with the camp and the work he has come from the East to superintend and make successful. He writes to his father that he intends to get a handful of the wealth in the great timber of the region. He gives Sletzt permission to ride Black Dolt, his saddle horse. In an emergency he proves to the foreman that he does not lack judgment. Sletzt tells him of the preacher. He discovers that Sletzt hears the plea of the Sletzt tribe of Indians and wonders what her surname is. In the flush of a tender moment, he calls her "the Night Wind in the Pines" and kisses her.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Newcomer Among the Pines.
One day soon after the men returned with word of the raft's safe delivery into the hands of Captain Gratz, Sandry, working over his books in the little office, heard a strange voice without.

"Oh, no," it was saying in fresh, sweet accents—and the very tone said East—"You need not wait. I'm going to stay. If this is the office, or headquarters of this place, I'll find whoever is in charge. Just put my trunk on that pile of timber. Be careful! Oh, do be careful! That case contains my typewriter, and it's more precious than gold! There—that's right. Now, what do I owe you?"

There was no answer and the click of money, and Sandry rose just as the office door opened. It was the East that confronted him. Fifth avenue. Itself, the whole inimitable metropolis refined into one woman.

"I must beg a thousand pardons," she said, her clear blue eyes raised to his face, "and a lot of indulgence. I want to be taken in. Do you think any one in this delightful place will do it?"

"The whole camp will fight for the privilege," promised Sandry rashly, falling in instantly with her bantering tone and responding to the frankness of her smile. He watched her sit down gracefully in the chair that he hurriedly pulled forward. With the first glimpse of her the old nostalgia had returned upon him and his heart clamored for home.

"You are from New York," he said simply.
"Yes. And I suppose I must explain at once. You westerners are so insistent on reasons. My name is Poppy Ordway—and I am of that unfortunate and much criticized species, the woman with a life work."

The smile she turned upon him was electric, full of that heady quality which is distinctive of the vital woman, the woman of strong and exorable passions; it appealed to Sandry instantly, so that a thrill of gladness ran through him to his very finger tips.

"I have written a few short stories which have been well received in the eastern magazines, but they fail to satisfy me. I have my first novel drafted, and it is over there on your lumber pile along with my precious typewriter. It is a tale of the lumber region—and I've come out to work on the ground. Do you think I can find sanctuary?"

"We'll see that you do," said Sandry pleasantly, "and you couldn't have struck a better spot for local color anywhere in the Northwest. We are elemental here, right down to the primitive, and we are swamped with 'atmosphere.' You just come along to Ma Dally," he promised, already using the tone of half-fellow which their common nativity and her frank manner had established between them.

Hungry he watched her gather up her skirts and precede him up the little path to the cook-shack, where Ma Dally was already standing in the door to take inventory. Every little movement was so familiar, so potent in its suggestion of home.

Chatting lightly, the stranger stepped up on the porch and smiled at the white-haired old woman.

"Ma Dally," said Sandry—ho had long since lost the sense of resentment at the family atmosphere of the camp—"this is Miss Ordway of New York—a famous author—and she has come West to write a new book. Luckily she struck us in her search for local color. Can we take her in?"

Ma Dally looked at the visitor sharply and Sandry saw a scarce perceptible change pass over her cheery features. The vital blue eyes of the younger woman gave back the scrutiny with perfect openness.

"Please do, Mrs. Dally," she said in her sweet voice. "Please, please do." "Don't know," said Ma slowly; "there ain't any room."

"I'll abdicate," put in Sandry quickly; "she may have my room and I'll put up a cot in the office."

Just at that moment Sletzt came in at the west door and, crossing the big room, stood looking out upon the group on the porch. Her dark eyes rested first with a fleeting glance on Sandry and then she saw the other. She did not speak but leaned against a jamb drinking in this apparition. The little pause that followed turned to the old lady's eyes, she said softly,

The stranger flashed a brilliant glance at her, and with an inimitably pretty gesture reached out a gloved hand and patted her arm, bare under the rolled-up sleeve.

"Mr. Sandry," called John Dally, standing on the foot-log, "will you come down here a minute?"
"Sletzt," said Ma, when the glittering guest had been shut away in Sandry's little south room, "want for do you want we should keep her?"

"Why—I don't know, mother," said the girl simply, "only she's too beautiful to let go. She looks like the sun on snow."

"Yes, yes, I think she does," returned Ma inscrutably, "and's about as cold and false."

As Sandry joined his foreman he saw that something had ruffled the usually placid temper of the slow giant.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Hampton of the Yella Pines is in the office," said Dally sharply, "and from his looks he's got something nasty up his sleeve."

"Oh, yes—Hampton—he's one of the owners, isn't he?"

The two men walked back to the office and found, seated in the swing chair, with his feet on Sandry's desk, a short, square man with a face and manner which set Sandry on edge at the first glance. They both bespoke a nature self-satisfied to the point of pride, a crafty shrewdness that had been eminently successful, and an adamant hardness of purpose.

"Ah, Mr. Sandry," he said, taking his feet from the table with insulting slowness, "I'm Hampton—of the Yella Pines—and I come over on a little matter of business."

Sandry bowed.
"Glad to know you, Mr. Hampton," he said civilly, though the memory of the damaged railway came suddenly up before him, blurring his appraisal of the man.

"And I might as well get it over with, for it's bound to be against the grain a bit."

"Ah," he spoke, a smile that was meant to be insolently apologetic but succeeded only in being clumsy, creased his weathered face, drawing his small, sharp eyes into narrow slits.

"Yes," said Sandry coldly.
"It's about that track of stumping you're shelling your log-trail across."

"Yes," said Sandry again. "What about the track? It isn't specially good and we're leaving it. Intend to cross it and cut into the East Belt."

There was a slight tone of satisfaction in his voice, for the East Belt stumping was a little the best thing in all this magnificent timber country, and the eyes of the Yellow Pines people had been on it enviously for years, according to John Dally.

"Just so, just so," said Hampton, "only I'm afraid we'll have to stop your operations, Mr. Sandry. The fact is, we've just bought this tract, and" as it comprises two hundred and fifty acres, an is in the form of a narrow strip running north and south, it will effectively keep you out of the East Belt—unless, of course, you should buy it of us."

With a Face and Manner Which Set Sandry on Edge.

For a moment Sandry regarded the speaker in mild astonishment.

"You must be mistaken, Mr. Hampton," he said; "all the stumping for five miles north and east is our property, with options on every privately owned section for another seven miles in both directions. And this tract you speak of lies within a mile and a half of camp. You are suffering under a hallucination."

Sandry smiled coldly.

"If you will take the trouble to look up the records in the state land office at Salem," returned Hampton smoothly, "you'll find that I'm in my right mind, all right. This tract has been duly filed on under the homestead law by one T. J. O'Connell, and sold by him last week to the Yella Pines Lumber company. Now, my young Eustace, you can't run yer log-trail across our land."

Hampton rose, his little eyes shining with savage triumph.
Sandry rose also.

"I'll neither take the trouble to go to Salem nor pay the least attention to your threats," he said, and his manner was coolly unconcerned, "and I should advise that you get this company out of your head as quickly as possible. And now good day."

He turned, as if the interview were at an end, and seated himself at the desk from which Hampton had just risen.

"By gosh, you'd better!" said the other with a snap of his heavy jaws as he strode past Dally and out of the open door.

"An' by God, we will!"
This last came in the deep boom of the foreman, who was watching the departing lumberman with the bitter enmity of years of fighting.

"Now, what do you think of that?" asked Sandry in profound disgust.

"Just what I've thought of him for years—damned spectacular bluff!"

CHAPTER IX.

Hampton and the East Belt.

In the press of business and the pleasant mulling over the whole old city of New York with Miss Ordway, Sandry forgot all about Hampton in the next few days. Ma Dally had nothing to say, keeping a grim silence, which Sandry noticed. As for Sletzt, she followed her with fascinated eyes whenever she appeared. Miss Ordway did not eat with the men. Her mornings were given up entirely to the incessant clicking of the typewriter in the seclusion of the little room, and she emerged after the noon hour, ate with Ma Dally and Sletzt, and invariably took a short walk in the afternoon.

In the evenings Sandry came in, and they sat in the empty dining room, discussing with a common knowledge that seemed to shut them apart together, the things of the great outside world. At such times Sletzt listened in quiet eagerness, her dark face aglow and her eyes like mysterious pools in the shadow of her heavy hair.

That week there were several arrivals at Dally's camp—well-clad, responsible-looking business men from Portland; and before they left, Sandry had landed such an order for logs as plunged the camp into the hardest work, longest hours and highest over-time it had ever known.

Also he sent out word to Toledo that he had use for all the men he could lay hands on.

An extra crew was put to building the log trail up through the slashed opening to the East Belt, and activity characterized the hills.

The incessant shrill notes of the donkey, the squeal and cough of his fussy labor, the rattle and clatter of the log-trail, began to be music in Sandry's ears, and the letters he wrote to his father became brighter, filled with the exhilaration of accomplishment.

For a day or two the work went forward duly and the new log of the fresh-laid trail gleamed white against the green of the mountains. Then Collins, sent into the next timber ahead to blaze for further operations, returned to the works in double-quick time.

"John," he said to the foreman, for none of the men would award Sandry the right of cancellation unless it was unavoidable, even yet, so distinct and deep-rooted was their aversion to the Easterner and his rawness; "John, they's a new homesteader's shack settin' square across the trail."

"The hell you say! Hampton?"
The loggor nodded. The purport of Hampton's visit had been freely spread in the camp.

Dally turned in Sandry.
"They's a new cabin settin' across our trail up in the track between here and the East Belt, Mr. Sandry. Let's go up an' take a look at it," he said.

"I guess Hampton's pushin' his bluff." With a surge of anger Sandry turned abruptly, and the two men struck up the new trail.

"I'll have to settle that man, Dally," said the owner; "has he been doing such things ever since the two companies have been rivals?"

"Pretty much. Sometimes we've been doin' 'em," returned Dally grimly. Sandry laughed.

"Well, you Westerners bellow in fixing things first-hand, anyway, which helps some."

Far up in the heavy timber they came into a small natural clearing some 200 feet in extent, set like a hole amid the solid bulk of the close-crowding pines. In the center was a tiny log shack, shake-roofed, without doors or windows, the very least a man might do in grudging compliance with the homestead law. They looked at it from all sides, noticed a few blazes on the nearest trees, read a clumsily executed trespass notice, and returned to camp.

"And us with our big contract with the Portland Lumber mill!" said Sandry. "I begin to see. Dally, you gather our ten men and go up and take that shack to pieces just as quick as you know how. Don't leave a trace. Bring the timbers away and start telling from that end to meet the trail."

As the foreman went among the men picking his crew, Sandry turned down across the slough toward the office. Once settled at his desk, he took out the records of the Dillingworth company and began a systematic search for word of the narrow tract of hill and timber between the camp and the fine East Belt.

When Dally returned at quitting time to report the demolition of the cabin and the start of the log cutting, he had found nothing.

"That's strange," he said absently. "Are those all the records, Dally? Has anything ever been destroyed? I can find nothing bearing on this piece of land, and yet this statement turned over to me by Frazer distinctly says that everything from the southwest section corner here at the camp within a radius of five miles north and east belongs to us, with numbers, and all data. What does this Hampton mean, and what sort of a tract is this strip? I see no mention made of it."

"No—that strip was part of the East Belt. The company bought it four years ago from a 'busted' speculator, who sold 'em first the north stumping and then this at a sacrifice price. That's why Hampton's always been so sore over it. He wanted it himself. Stafford, the speculator's name was. A smooth man from the East. There was some hitch about titles—specially about this here strip, an' the deal hung fire for some time an' Hampton danced a war dance, he was so blame anxious to knock it, but old Frazer bent him to it an' won out. Finally it was settled an' the strip come under the East Belt deed."

"Oh, I see!" said Sandry, shifting a sheaf of papers. "Here it is. Well, that's a relief. And now for this Mister Hampton."

But Hampton was for himself and with a vengeance.

That evening Sandry met Sletzt across the little meadow back of the camp, where he had gone for the mail sack, left swinging on the forked stick set up beside the county road.

"Been up on the ridge?" he asked, vexed that it should take a slight effort to keep his voice to the common place. This girl in her natural setting always took him out of the everyday, affected him like a play with lowered lights, soft music and alien scenes.

"Yes," she said dreamily, falling in to the whimsical speech that only escaped her when she stood apart on the hills, or listened to the pines, "it came tonight."

Sandry had gone a little way to meet her and the camp was shut from sight by a clump of spruce, new growth and low-branched.

"Yes—the light. Oh, the great lights—red and gold and purple. When the sun breaks through just at the last. And I know the ocean is under it—blue and purple, too, like the hills. Some day I'll see it."

"You picture these things, don't you?" he said, "the things you have never seen—the sea and the cities and the outside world?"

"Sometimes I know them all—my way. In their way—the road way. They might not be so beautiful. The Preacher says the glories of the world are here on the Devil. But I don't think so. It don't seem as if God would make things beautiful and let the Devil have them to rule people with—and God made all things. And we're his best things."

"You believe that?" asked Sandry, with an odd note in his voice.
"Believe it?" said the girl wonderingly. "Of course. Don't you?"

"Well—it's been a long while since I've believed anything."

The girl was near to him now, the dreamy look of her eyes dissipated in amusement.

"You're lost!" she said simply. "The Preacher would say so—oven Wahloowah would say so; and old Kolawmie!"
"Wahloowah—Kolawmie? Who are they?"

"The Indian woman you saw me talking to in the glade and an old, old man of the Sletzt. He who believes nothing will be punished by the Great Spirit—even as the preacher says in his way. And the Bible."

That sudden mist in her eyes touched Sandry.

"And so you would have me believe, little Sletzt?" he asked gently. The mist had thickened under the heavy lashes, and a look of distress was on her face where every emotion bared itself in unguarded innocence to the observer.

"Oh, dear heaven!" she breathed, "yes—oh, yes, you must! Why you would—you would—but she could get no further with the appalling thought."

"And you?" probed Sandry curiously. "Have you visions of the soul's reward and punishment? Are you bound for celestial peace?"

"Yes," she said solemnly. "I must save my soul, though I lose the whole world."

The majestic Bible language cast over the man a feeling of smallness and he dropped his eyes.

"All right, Sletzt," he said, smoothing the braid in his fingers. "I'll be have anything you say—get me up a totem pole or attend Sunday school at Toledo. Only forget it. By George, what a head of hair! If I were a woman I'd give a thousand dollars for it!"

He lifted the rope and weighed it critically.
"Why, what for?" asked Sletzt, her eyes still solemn.

"To have it, of course. You're dreadfully unsophisticated. Come along."

And swinging the mail sack he turned toward camp. Sletzt came silently at his heels, falling in behind him with a certain instinct, and Sandry had an unpleasant suggestion of wilderness processions he had seen entering Toledo, enlivened by brilliant hues and canine adjuncts. He turned whimsically for a look at the rear. Consistently brought it up with a faithful note to detail that was convincing.

At the western door of the cook-shack they were met by Miss Ordway, blooming like a hothouse plant behind plate glass, an incongruous element in her belted dress of light broadcloth. She leaned in the doorway with inimitable grace, an immaculate hand on either side.

"The wild huntress!" she smiled at Sletzt.

"Oh, no, no—I could never do it. Unless," she finished, still in that earnest manner, "someone I loved were starving. Then I could."

Sandry looked at the two sweet faces, one so lovely in its smiling, amused alertness, the other so abandoned to the feeling her own words had stirred, and a deep admiration for both filled him.

"Wild to the wild," he said under his breath. "What are you, little Sletzt? I wonder if I'll ever know?"

"Sletzt," broke in the foreman, passing in his lumbering fashion, "the Preacher's come. I heard today he's been seen a couple times—once across in the Big Slough below the bridge, an' once in the hills."

For the first time since he had known this girl with her varied nature, Sandry saw the swift lighting of girlish excitement in her face as she flashed around at Dally.

"Oh!" she cried gladly, "how soon will he be here, I wonder?"
"Don't know."

LENDING A HELPING HAND

Teamster Gave Handcart Pusher a "Lift" That Was Something to Be Appreciated.

Here is an interesting street scene, drawn by a writer.

The handcart was of a familiar sort—a pair of high wheels with a long platform of slats resting on the axle and a crossbar at one end for a handle. A man stands behind the crossbar and breathes it to propel the vehicle.

The handcart was piled high with big bags filled with waste paper—a cumbersome, heavy load that would have been hard to handle anywhere, and was doubly troublesome going up the slope from Nassau street to Broadway. The handcart man had to bend over the handle and push with all his might to keep the load moving at all.

Coming up behind him was a driver with an empty truck, drawn by a pair of big horses. When the driver saw what was ahead, he started up his team a little and skillfully set the end of the pole square in the middle of the rear-most bag, on the handcart, where he could push to the greatest purpose without disturbing the load. Thus the horses began to push the handcart up the hill.

All the handcart man had to do was to stand up, hold on to the handlebar, and keep the handcart straight. The big horses, guided by the friendly driver, were doing the pushing; and so, easily enough, the man got his load up the rest of the slope and round to the easy level of Broadway.—New York Sun.

British Sex Equation.

There are more women than men in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. Consequently, as a member of the house of lords pointed out in debate, to grant the parliamentary franchise to women in the British islands "would mean the handing over of the country and of the empire to a female electorate, which was a perilous step to take." Still, considering the fighting qualities of the militant sisters who want to vote, the empire might be in safe hands if it came to an armed encounter with a foreign foe. However, the argument was effective, for the lords defeated the woman suffrage bill which was before them by a vote of 104 to 60.

Reasonable Advance.

There is a young author in Baltimore who is determined to achieve fame in the writing line if it takes his whole life. Accordingly, he is even willing to defray the cost of putting on the market the numerous novels he writes from year to year.

On the occasion of his last visit to his publisher, however, he was somewhat vexed, a rather unusual thing for him. "Why," asked he, "do you charge me more this time than before?"

"Well," said the publisher, with the utmost frankness, "the composers were constantly falling asleep over your last novel."—Harpur's Magazine.

HIGH PRICES—GOOD CROPS

And Good Demand for All Farm Products.

It is no new experience for settlers located in a fertile country such as Western Canada, where lands may be bought at very reasonable prices, to harvest a crop that in one season pays the entire cost of their farm. Undoubtedly this was the experience of many farmers during 1915, but one instance may be quoted. A settler who came to Canada from the United States some years ago decided to add to his holdings by buying an adjoining quarter section near his home at Warner, at $20.00 an acre, with terms spread over a period of years. He got the land into a good state of cultivation and last spring put the whole quarter section in wheat. When the crop was threshed he found that it only took half the wheat on the farm to pay the whole purchase price of it; in short, a single year's crop paid the cost of the land, paid all the expenses of operation and left him a handsome surplus as profit. This settler had some adjoining land, and his whole wheat crop for the season amounted to over 18,000 bushels. He is now planning to obtain some sheep and invest his profits in live stock which will assure him a good living irrespective of what the season may happen to be.

Canada's financial position is excellent. All speculation has been eliminated, and trading is done on a cash basis, with restricted credit.

Detailed figures of Canada's trade for twelve months ending October 31 show how the war is forcing Canadian trade into new channels. One of the most extraordinary changes is in commerce, with the United States. A couple of years ago Canada imported from the United States two or three hundred million dollars' worth of goods more than she exported. The balance of trade was all with the United States. The balance is rapidly disappearing, and the present outlook is that by the end of this year Canada will have exported to the United States more than she has imported.

The figures for the past four years are illuminating. They are as follows:

	Exports.	Imports.
1912	$145,721,660	$12,657,022
1913	179,050,796	44,341,840
1914	213,493,406	42,074,523
1915	314,118,774	346,569,924

Four years ago, in 1912, the balance of trade in favor of the United States was no less than two hundred and sixty-seven millions, and this year, the balance is reduced to only thirty-two millions. The figures are extraordinary and reflect the changed and new conditions in Canada. It looks as if for the first time in nearly half a century this year Canada will sell more to the United States than she will buy from the Americans.—Advertiser.

Synthetic Eggs.

An Austrian scientist of Graz is said to have been making synthetic eggs. He has been able to extract the albumen contained in the blood of bullocks, sheep, pigs, and other animals slaughtered for human consumption, and to present it in such a form that it has no trace of its origin, either in taste or smell. As prepared by his system, it is a coarse, yellow powder to which he has given the name of haemalbum. His process has already been applied in a number of German and Austrian abattoirs, and haemalbum is in use in many hospitals of the central empires as a substitute for eggs. It dissolves in water, and can also be used in the preparation of pastry and other dishes.

Knew the Drama, Too.

Father, in the hall, has been standing for an hour while Millicent and Harold bid each other good night in the doorway.

"Parting," quoth Harold, "is such sweet sorrow that I could say good-night till!"

At this speech father gets a Shakespearean inspiration of his own and tramps down the stairs.

"Seems to me," he asserted, "there is too much adieu about nothing here."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Unpleasant Outlook.

First Tommy (in the trenches)—"Wotcher lookin' so blue nabit, Bill?"

Second Tommy—Just got a letter from the missus, ter say 'er sister is puttin' up wiv 'er and 'as got the measles. It ain't 'arf a go, it ain't, wiv me goin' 'ome on leave tomorrow, and a dangerous trouble like that in the 'ouse.—London Opinion.

Easy Victim.

"You seem to be in a melancholy mood this morning."

"Yes, I've been thinking about the thousands of poor fellows being killed in Europe."

"Still, that isn't your fault."

"I know it, but you see, I don't own any war stocks and there is nothing to prevent my yielding to acute depression."

"It mistook it for a neutral canary," he explained.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1916

VERY SUCCESSFUL
PARTY HELD AT
MR. AND MRS. BATES

For some time past it has been generally conceded by those who are familiar with the management of the popular hostelry, known as the Queen of the West hotel, that when they start out to give an entertainment there is no means or bounds, no unsurmountable obstacles of sufficient magnitude to hinder them from accomplishing their purposes, and Saturday evening, March 18, was no exception to the rule and the opinion of all present was unanimous that the event of that evening if possible, outclassed all previous records as to a jolly good old fashioned merry making time, for it was not intended to be a classical high-toned affair, for style and modern adornment were eliminated from start to finish.

There was something over one hundred invited guests, mostly residents of Grass Lake, that participated in the festivities and as it was to be a hard times party, according to program, many of the costumes to say the least were very unique and comical, and from the time the guests began to arrive until the finish one could not resist from being convulsed with laughter, not only at the confusion of outfits but the drollery and queer antics of those inclined that way. We must not omit to make special mention of two or three that seemingly were more attractive than some of the others. The first on the list was Carl Martin of Petite Lake. His triumphal entree was heralded from the blasts of a prehistoric trumpet, and if we were asked to describe his armor and outer decorations would say that to the best of our judgment, it would be a cross between a ceremonial costume of a Pinto Indian and a bathing suit, of a Hottentot war chief. Modesty forbids us to fully describe the adornment of Mr. C. Willey, while it might have caused a slight flush to diffuse the cheeks of a few of the younger maidens present, the peals of laughter and applause that greeted his grand entree in the midst of the assemblage thrust aside all thoughts of decorum and conventionality. We must not forget to make mention of Miss —, who has been residing at the hotel for some time past, and if there was a queen of the evening the laurels belong to her. We will not try to describe the robes that artistically enveloped her graceful form but her hat was a most wonderful creation and if it is the prevailing style we must be reconciled to the fact that ere long the feathered tribes of this mundane sphere will become extinct, for I have every reason to believe that every bird and fowl known to scientific research was represented by a portion of its plumage on that most gorgeous hat.

As we are naturally inclined to be very observing we came near making a very bad break when we discovered that the guy ropes on some other attachment that held in position as we supposed an under skirt worn by Mrs. G. Yopp had given away and we had concluded the lady in question was about to loose that portion of her reinment, and on the impulse of the moment was about to call her aside and as gently and in as few words as possible whisper the facts in her ear, when in the nick of time a mature matron came to our rescue and said it was all right that it was not a skirt that it was a — well we just can't remember the name of it, but at any rate it was modern commodity only to conform to the occasion an extra story or else a sub-basement had been attached thereto, the reason for this was not fully explained by our informant. At any rate we accepted the explanation as far as it went and let our gaze search for other fields of exploration.

But now we will try to describe the program of the evening. Soon after the guests had been ushered in the spacious dining room and parlors where tables had been placed in position for playing cinch, when all was in readiness Prof. Bob W— (who has been a fixture at the hotel for several years and has always arranged the musical programs, with his assistants, struck up a melody and furnished the music for the entire evening.

After finishing the specified numbers of games the tables were cleared away as if by magic, then those who wished to participate in the dizzy mazes of the dance had an opportunity to do so. The rooms are spacious and ample for all to mingle in the merry throng excepting when Lon Little, would be party of the first part, in a quadrille and our genial Bob Selter (who by the way was the prompter of the evening) would give the command to half promenade or right and left four, and the said Lon would open up the throttle, put on a full head of steam and steer those No. 16 shoes down the line, then the others would be obliged to fall back or take the consequences, for Lon got there just the same as if he had the right of way as per previous arrangement. After dancing for an hour or two the tables were again whisked in position and an ample repast of the New England type or series was dealt out with lavish hands and was certainly very inviting and relished by all epicurians and every one present.

We can not refrain to acknowledge the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Bates are modern entertainers and with the assistance of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herman, who have recently assumed the obligation to love, honor and obey until the grand finish and let us hope that their journey through this life and its environments may be as pleasant and harmonious as the social event at the Queen of the West on Saturday evening, March 18, 1916, and that prosperity and happiness be dealt out to them in abundance.

The People of This Community Are Reading This Paper Today

By J. R. HAMILTON
Former Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's, Philadelphia

You, sir, or madam, are part of a greater audience than was ever gathered together in this community. Your combined power is that of a great army.

Your possible purchasing power alone is enough to make every commercial institution here respond to your will.

You are going into the stores of this city now to spend that money.

And what you are trying to find out is how to spend it to your best advantage and where. Let us see how we can help you most.

Here in this paper today is the advertising news of the strong men of trade, the regular buyers and the best judges of merchandise. They have ransacked their shelves and their stock-rooms to give you the finest they have. They are too shrewd to spend their money and attract your attention to anything but the best.

This is their biggest season, too, and some of the values they are offering today will seem impossible to you who do not know a buyer's necessities.

If you could go behind the scenes and see their stock of shoes and coats and dresses and suits and underwear, of furniture and rugs and draperies, all shrewdly gathered from the ends of the earth, all brought down to the lowest figure or raised to the highest standard of quality by every method known to expert merchandising, then you would understand the labor that has been expended for you.

There is no advertisement in this paper too small for you to notice today. For every one of these smaller merchants has had enough faith in his merchandise to put his announcement before you as large as he could; enough courage to stand back of it, and the integrity to sign his name to what he presents. He has some good reason for talking to you, and the fact that he is talking to you is proof of his ability and success.

And there is no advertisement too large for you to study carefully. Many a buyer, with some good value worth a column of space, has had to put it in the middle of half a page and crowd it into three short lines.

Here, then, is your compendium of merchandise, your catalogue of good goods; here amongst these merchants who are asking your attention today through the columns of their advertisements and offering you the best that they have.

The Twinklers were very pleasantly entertained by Mrs. T. A. Somerville and Mrs. Geo. Huber at the home of the former on Tuesday afternoon. The affair was in the nature of "the last day in a country school." The school teacher was dressed in her best in honor of the day and all the girls were there decked out in their prettiest. Most of them had on real swell gowns but a couple of the poorest ones had to wear their gingham aprons. It being the last day the children spoke pieces and had a general good time. Nina proved to be some musician and Eva sure could sing America. Mary kept insisting that she knew lots of pieces and wanted to be the whole program. All would have been very harmonious if Bessie had not cried so terribly because she forgot her piece and if Eva and Lottie had not nearly reached the hair pulling stage in an effort to see which was the smarter. After the school program had closed, tables were placed and cinch was indulged in during the remainder of the afternoon. After lunch the guests departed declaring that those who missed this party had missed the time of the season.

Does The Saloon Raise or Lower Them?

VILLA IN FIGHT WITH CARRANZISTAS; TRAPPED BY FORCE UNDER PERSHING

Bandit Defeated by First Chief's Troops at Namiquipa—American Expedition is Split In to Three Sections and Are Closing In on Outlaw and His Gang.

El Paso, Tex., March 22.—Francisco Villa was in a desperate battle with Carranza forces under Colonel Cano at Namiquipa on Monday. Here the bandit leader turned on his pursuers and made a stand, after a running fight which started at Las Cruces during the forenoon.

United States troops from the command of Col. George A. Dodd are hurrying to the support of the Carranzistas from El Valle. Another detachment is following the trail which leads to the pass through the mountains of Babicora. It is believed Villa will retreat in the direction of Laguna Babicora.

U. S. Men to Join Fight.

Reports indicate the Americans will be in the midst of the fighting soon, either at Namiquipa or the mountain pass. An engagement at the latter point would give Villa a distinct advantage, as he is expected to give fight from the mountain slopes.

General Pershing reported on Monday that Villa had been reported defeated by Mexican government troops near Cruces and that he was retreating northward. General Pershing's report was followed, however, by the official report that Villa was still fighting Carranzistas under Colonel Cano at Namiquipa, south of Cruces. Colonel Cano has 900 cavalrymen.

Villa May Go to Mountains.

If the Carranza force wins in the fighting that was said to be continuing late in the day Villa will have to move northward along a road over which a detachment of American troops is riding southward, or leave the road and head for the Santa Maria mountains that parallel the road to the east, or to the Oriental range on the west side.

Retreat, according to the report, is impracticable because of the presence to the rear of Mexican troops who forced him to turn northward from Cruces.

The detachment that is headed south on the road along which Villa was reported as advancing is one of three subdivisions operating south of Casas Grandes.

One column was sent toward Lake Babicora, 70 miles south of Casas Grandes and somewhat to the west. The other two detachments moved as one to Galeana, south and east of Casas Grandes, and there separated, one continuing in a more easterly direction toward Cariven, 65 miles from Casas Grandes, and the other south toward Cruces, 50 miles south of Casas Grandes, which now has become the advanced base of the expeditionary force.

Pershing Directs Moves.

Just where General Pershing is was not announced, but he is directing the work of the three detachments and by means of scouts is attempting to keep in communication.

It was known at headquarters, however, that divergent directions will make this difficult. The mountainous character of the country also will afford elevations that will make more feasible communication by signaling.

From all points to which the three detachments are moving Villa has been reported in the vicinity. Although it is realized that he could not have been at all points where he was said to have been, the three detachments will be so widely separated by the time they have gone a short distance farther that it was regarded as almost certain that one of them would come in contact with him.

Force Near Valle.

The force moving toward Cruces was only a short distance north of Valle, twenty-eight miles north of Cruces on Monday afternoon.

The steady and rapid advance of a part of General Pershing's force into Mexico has increased the desire of those at army headquarters here to be permitted to use the Northwestern railway for moving supplies. Cruces, a point that probably will be reached by one of the cavalry detachments, is about 200 miles from the border, and Lake Babicora a like distance.

It was pointed out that any delay in getting supplies through from the border to Casas Grandes, from where they can be sent forward to the mobile units operating south of there, might interfere seriously with General Pershing's plan of pursuit.

General Funston evinced no impatience, but he did show concern, and expressed the hope that Carranza would not misunderstand the motive for his request.

Even if the request is granted, it will be some days before the road can be used, because at two points at least repairs will have to be made. American rolling stock will have to be sent across the line, and American crews and dispatchers will be used.

General Funston has made it plain to the war department that his only desire to use the road is for the transportation of supplies, but he has not concealed the fact that a guard would be placed on every train and that it might become necessary to station guards at different points along the line.

General Pershing has advised General Funston that he has found quantities of alfalfa for his animals, also that he has experienced difficulty in getting fresh beef.

More Troops in Mexico.

Columbus, N. M., March 22.—A large body of American cavalry left here. The troops which were brought here from Texas border points were preceded by a motor train carrying supplies. Whether the detachment will serve as a separate command in the effort to capture Francisco Villa or whether it is to join the punitive expedition force now in the field under General Pershing somewhere in northern Chihuahua was not indicated by military authorities here.

Accompanying the troops were a number of American civilian scouts, said to know every foot of the mountain trails of Chihuahua.

That more Villistas than the 79 already accounted for were killed in the running engagement following the raid on Columbus was indicated in the discovery of three additional bodies near the boundary reported here by H. K. Lemmon, a ranchman.

Allow Villa to Escape?

El Paso, Tex., March 22.—The Carranza forces have failed to hold their end of the net that was closing about Pancho Villa and the bandit chief has escaped in his mountain haunts about Guerrero, according to reliable information received here.

The escape of the bandit is, however, far from being the most serious item of news which reached the border. A feature of the gravest importance was injected into the situation by substantial confirmation of the numerous reports received for the last week that the Mexican troops were not only failing to cooperate with the American troops but in certain instances, at least, were actually withdrawing from the field of operations.

Refused to Fight Villa.

It was learned on unquestionable authority that the troops of the de facto government which had been stationed at Casas Grandes have been withdrawn and are now in and about Juarez. From the same source it was learned that at least one detachment of Carranza troops had refused to fight Villa and had withdrawn on the bandit's approach, leaving him free to pass into his favorite mountain fastness in the great continental divide south of Namiquipa.

This detachment withdrew on receipt of a message that he was warning not on Mexicans, but the enemies of Mexicans.

The extraordinary rapidity with which the American cavalry had pushed into Mexico gave rise to high hopes that the unexpected bandit had been cornered. This seemed inevitable if the Carranza soldiers did their part and if the account of the strength of their field forces was correct.

Moves East and North.

In the last few days Villa has been variously reported by General Gavira, the Carranza commander at Juarez, at points along a line reaching north and south from Galeana to Namiquipa, a distance of about seventy-five miles. By the same accounts he has not been moving steadily south but roving north and east.

The mountainous, canyon-split, roadless country in which he is operating adds many miles to the country he has covered as compared with its distance on the map.

The reason for some of the Carranza troops moving to the border remains unexplained. It is impossible even to make a fair estimate of the number of men under General Gavira at Juarez.

General Pershing reported that the garrison at Casas Grandes was "friendly but passive." In the same report he said that the Mormon colonists there looked upon the Americans as their "rescuers." New estimates placed by General Pershing placed Villa's losses in killed, wounded and deserted, since crossing the line to attack Columbus at 200.

The secrets were revealed in a diary taken from the body of Pablo Robles, Villa's prime assassin, after he was killed in the massacre at Columbus. Jotted Spanish notes reveal the mysteries that have enshrouded Villa to defy law, order and humanity in the northern hills. They disclose the hidden trails over which Villa led his men when pressed, they show where his cannon were hidden and they disclose the names of the men who are smuggling arms to him as well as those who are acting as his agents.

U. S. GETS VILLA'S SECRETS

Diary Found on the Body of Pablo Robles Reveals Hidden Mountain Trails.

El Paso, Tex.—Pancho Villa's most cherished secrets, the secrets that have made the outlaw chief's career such a long one, are in the hands of the state department at Washington. In all probability they will be most important guides to the expedition that is ordered to wipe out the bandit leader.

"DEAD OR ALIVE!"

ARMY MEASURE WINS DUTCH STEAMER SUNK

SENATE UNANIMOUSLY APPROVES RECRUITING BILL.

War Department Takes Immediate Steps for the Enlisting of 20,000 Additional Men.

Washington, March 17.—The senate approved unanimously the joint resolution adopted by the house to bring the mobile army up to its full strength, which would add about 20,000 men to the present establishment. The resolution now goes to the president for his approval.

Sixty-nine senators were in the chamber and all voted for the resolution. When the vote was announced Senator McComber declared it served as notice to the world that "the nation and this congress stand as a single man in defense of American rights."

As soon as the senate assembled Chairman Chamberlain of the military committee asked unanimous consent for consideration of the house resolution.

Senator Gronau, Republican, at first objected, but withdrew his opposition, while Senator Locke Smith offered an amendment to stipulate that new enlistments should not be for more than two years. He agreed, however, not to press his proposal.

Senator Vanderman, Democrat, urged immediate action for the mobilization bill, but a vote was delayed while Senator Newlands, Democrat, spoke on preparedness and urged his proposal for a joint congressional committee to coordinate defense legislation. Unanimous approval of the house resolution then followed.

When word that the senate had adopted the army resolution reached the war department the adjutant general's office took steps to begin recruiting the additional men immediately. Instructions were prepared for recruiting officers throughout the United States to conduct an active campaign.

POSTAL BANK LAW AMENDED

Senate Passes House Bill Increasing Deposit Maximum From $500 to $1,000.

Washington, March 17.—The senate passed on Wednesday the house bill amending the postal savings bank law so as to increase the individual deposit maximum from $500 to $1,000 with interest and an additional $1,000 without interest. The bill was amended to permit deposit of postal savings funds in state and national banks regardless of affiliation with the federal reserve system, and to provide increased compensation to parcel post carriers on account of the weight increase.

LINER TUBANTIA VICTIM OF MINE OR TORPEDO.

Vessel Carried 87 Passengers and Crew of 300, All Reported Saved.

London, March 18.—The 13,000-ton Royal Dutch Lloyd liner Tubantia, outward bound from Amsterdam for the River Plate, with 87 passengers, three of whom were Americans, and a crew of 300 was sunk Thursday off Noordvinder lightship, on the Dutch coast. A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam quotes the captain, H. K. H. Wytman, as saying his ship was torpedoed. Sensational reports from Berlin claim that she struck a mine. Advice indicates that all on board were saved.

The Tubantia was struck at about three o'clock in the morning, a great hole being torn in her stern. She remained afloat, however, until about 8:30. She sank about two miles east of Noordvinder light.

The explosion put the steering gear of the vessel out of commission, but no one on board was injured. Water running through the gap in the vessel's stern penetrated the corridors and engine room. It was alone owing to the fact that the modern construction of the ship—she was in service only a year—enabled her to float for several hours after receiving her death blow, that the loss of life was not heavy.

The Tubantia, which carried a general cargo and mails, was making for Falmouth, where she was to take aboard passengers for South America, when the explosion occurred. Her proximity to the coast enabled rescue ships to reach her quickly. Her calls for assistance were answered by a life-saving vessel from the Hook of Holland, the Dutch steamship Krakatau and two other ships, one Dutch and one Swedish.

8 FALL IN AIR BATTLE

FIFTY AEROPLANES ENGAGED IN TERRIFIC FIGHT AT MUELHAUSEN.

BOMBS DROPPED ON TOWNS

Airman Rammaged German Craft, Which Fell in Flames—Five of Kaiser's Machines and Three French Destroyed.

Basel, Switzerland (via Paris), March 22.—When twenty-three allied aeroplanes raided Muelhausen, upper Alsace, the greatest aerial battle of the war took place. Accounts just received here declare that more than fifty machines were fighting at such close quarters that the German anti-aircraft guns had to cease firing to avoid hitting their own machines.

One French airman rammed a German machine, which fell in flames. Five German aeroplanes and three French fell, the occupants of all being killed. Even while the allied armies were fighting they dropped a number of bombs upon military positions. Many thousands of persons witnessed the combat.

London, March 22.—Sixty-five allied aeroplanes bombarded the Belgian coast town of Zeebrugge. All returned. Zeebrugge is on the Belgian coast twelve miles northeast of Ostend. Since the German occupation this port has become of considerable importance, particularly as a German submarine base. It is one of the principal points from which submarine operations in the North sea are directed.

The following official statement was made:

"In the early hours of the morning a combined force of approximately fifty British, French and Belgian aeroplanes and seaplanes, accompanied by fifteen fighting machines, left and attacked the German seaplane station at Zeebrugge and the aerodrome at Houtave, near Zeebrugge.

"Considerable damage appears to have been done. The machines on the average carried 200 pounds of bombs. All the machines returned safely.

"One Belgian officer is reported seriously wounded.

"All the British machines referred to were naval."

20,000 RUSS FALL IN BATTLE

Vienna Admits That Austrians Were Compelled to Give Up Ground on Eastern Front.

London, March 22.—An official statement from the German war office admitted the Austrians were compelled to give ground near the Vofcecko bridgehead. The Slavs attacked violently with grenades, following an artillery bombardment.

"Our defense line was withdrawn somewhat," admitted the Austrian war office, "but all attacks at other points were repulsed."

Berlin dispatches asserted that the Russians lost 20,000 in killed and wounded and prisoners in a sudden offensive against Von Hindenburg's lines on a sixty-five-mile front in the Vilna region.

Petrograd dispatches are silent on the new Russian offensive. It was believed here that the Russian strokes were delivered to prevent the shifting of more German troops to the western front.

Petrograd dispatches are silent on the new Russian offensive.

Air battles constituted the greatest activity on the western front throughout Saturday night and Sunday. In one raid directed by French flyers against German towns in upper Alsace, two sky fleets clashed in one of the most spectacular air battles of the war. Four French aeroplanes and three Germans were brought down.

TAGGART IS NAMED SENATOR

Governor Ralston in Making Appointment Pays Tribute to Prominent Indiana Man.

Indianapolis, March 22.—Thomas Taggart, Democratic national committeeman, was appointed United States senator to fill the vacancy by the death of Senator Benjamin F. Shively by Governor Ralston on Monday. Mr. Taggart expects to leave for Washington immediately.

The new senator has been prominent in politics in Indiana for twenty-five years and has maintained the leadership of the Democratic party in the state practically all of that time. The only offices Mr. Taggart has ever held were auditor of this (Marion) county for two terms and three times mayor of Indianapolis.

After Governor Ralston signed Taggart's commission he wrote him a letter saying it afforded him genuine pleasure to appoint him United States senator.

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste; liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Half Turns White in a Night.

That hair ever turns white in a single night has been emphatically denied by some doctors. In spite of historic instances—such as that of Marie Antoinette—to the contrary. But Doctor Lehar called the attention of the Societe Medicale des Hopitaux of Paris to an actual case. It was that of a young French soldier who was blown into the air by a mine and buried in the earth, from which he extricated himself with difficulty.

The man was denuded by the detonation, his face was burned, and there were several bruises on his head. He was taken to a neighboring hospital, where the following day he noticed four spots of white hair on the fronto-parieto-occipital region of his head. The loss of color was complete from the roots to the ends of the hairs, and the white hairs were as firmly in his scalp as their brown neighbors.

Improved Process of Freezing Fish.

It is announced that a Danish company, with headquarters at Copenhagen, is utilizing a new process for freezing fish, which is declared to be a decided improvement over previous methods. Recent demonstrations resulted in the freezing of herring in a half hour which, under the system previously employed, took several hours.

MORE THAN EVER

Increased Capacity for Work Since Leaving Off Coffee.

Many former coffee drinkers who have mental work to perform day after day, have found a better capacity and greater endurance by using Postum instead of coffee. An Illinois woman writes:

"I had drank coffee for about twenty years, and finally had what the doctor called 'coffee heart.' I was nervous and extremely despondent; had little mental or physical strength left; had kidney trouble and constipation.

"The first noticeable benefit which followed the change from coffee to Postum was the improved action of the kidneys and bowels. In two weeks, my heart action was greatly improved, and my nerves steadied.

"Then I became less despondent, and the desire to be active again, showed proof of renewed physical and mental strength.

"I formerly did mental work and had to give it up on account of coffee, but since using Postum I am doing hard mental labor with less fatigue." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

The HOME BEAUTIFUL

Flowers and Shrubbery - Their Care and Cultivation

Pansies Do Best in Cold Frame.

COLOR IN ANNUALS

For summer flowering, annuals are very satisfactory, blooming through the entire season, while the cost of a seed packet is but a trifle.

Good taste dictates the system of planting large bunches of single species together rather than the old way of mixing a dozen varieties in as many square feet.

It is the same plan that places a dozen carnations or roses in a vase rather than the heterogeneous collection in the old-fashioned bouquet. Mass your flowers if you would secure the best effect.

The old callionys, "lady's breast," they used to call it, is a handsome plant, its long, slender stems rendering it extremely useful for cutting, and the shades of gold and brown harmonizing nicely.

A mass of it next to the shrubbery in the background gives a most pleasing effect.

Some handsome forms of single dahlias may be secured by planting a packet of the seed in pots early in the spring and transplanting the young seedlings to the garden as soon as danger from frost is over.

The colors of some is very fine and the color of the single flowers the plant is a good one of getting a variety at a small cost.

Unless sown very early these seedlings rarely mature tubers that will keep through the winter, though they commence flowering almost as soon as the plants are started from the tubers.

The chrysanthemum-flowered asters are much more pleasing, both grown in masses and for cutting, than the "quilled" bouquet sorts. If but two kinds are started, let them be white and lavender with rose as a third choice.

Do not order mixed packets of seed. It is a great temptation to do so, but if fine specimens are expected, the sure way is to single out one or two colors. While the mixed packets are in many instances highly satisfactory, the single colors are made up from the best individuals.

With pansies for spring, sweet peas for summer, and asters for autumn, one may be sore of having an abundance of the most beautiful cut flowers for all occasions.

Red petunias and red geraniums are a combination to be avoided. They make a most discordant note.

One of the best plants to use for massing is salvia.

Single petunias are easily grown from seed, although this seed is so minute. In fact, they will perpetuate themselves from year to year through self-sown seed.

If you want the double varieties, the safest and quickest way is to buy slips at the greenhouse, as the seed is difficult for the novice to manage.

DO AWAY WITH ROSE PESTS

To do away with rose pests mix by rapid stirring a tablespoonful of coal oil with a pint of very hot strong soap suds, and when well mixed add this to enough hot suds to make a gallon.

Mix a pint of unsalted lime with a quart of water and when settled pour the clear lime into the coal oil emulsion, adding to this a teaspoonful of Paris green, stirring it all rapidly and thoroughly.

Keep this mixture well stirred when using and spray or syringe the leaves, under the upper side, with plenty of the mixture.

It will be good for the bush, it not healthy for the bugs and slugs.

TRY AMARANTHUS

The amaranthus is a much neglected plant. It can be made more effective than the canna or the calladium. With its color schemes in red, and red and yellow, red, yellow and green can very easily be worked out. Give it a trial.

PURIFY WATER IN LILY PONDS

To purify water in the lily ponds and to destroy insect life in it, slake fresh stone lime in water, making a liquid as for whitewash, and stir some of this into the water until it becomes thoroughly incorporated. If not so effective add a little more. The lime must be fresh and sharp.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Monument Drive Beauty Plans Revive Stories

WASHINGTON.—The grounds surrounding the base of the Washington monument may be beautified still further by the setting out there of a screen of evergreens and other shrubbery, as the result of the eighty-second annual meeting of the Washington National Monument society. Also, another history of the monument may be published shortly, as the result of the meeting, to meet a demand of libraries all over the country, the editions of two previous histories of the monument having been exhausted.

Several interesting old stories were revived in connection with the monument as the result of the meeting. When the monument was being built and the stones were being received from the states they were placed, as received, in a long shed near the monument, known then as the "lapidarium." Tourists and souvenir hunters haunted this place, and when they were not carefully watched they chipped off pieces of the stones to take home. A medical society sent a stone with carved figures of personages in the medical world, and the souvenir hunters chipped off the hands of some of the figures. Michigan's stone bore a coat of arms in silver. Vandalism took a letter or two of silver out of the motto of the coat of arms, although these were replaced.

There is to this day some little uncertainty that the stone representing Texas is actually the stone sent by that state. Old records (dated 1850) show a resolution of thanks to Texas officials for a stone, so it is certain that a stone was sent, but the stone in the monument is badly defaced and deteriorated, and it is intended to urge Texas to replace it. It is defaced so badly that the carvings cannot be identified as the carvings of the Texas stone.

One interesting thing about the monument is the aluminum cap on the topmost point. This is about 12 by 9 inches, and, years ago, when it was brought to Washington, it was a great curiosity, as it was said to be the first piece of aluminum of any size ever made. It cost the government $300.

Creased Trousers on Statue of Senator Rice

SENATOR HENRY MOWER RICE died long since, but he was a great character in his day—so great that the people of Minnesota have erected a marble statue to his memory in that chamber of horrors known as Statuary hall, where the capitol guards "orate" on the various little odds and ends of interest to be found in that dismal tomb. Speaker Clark always smiles when anyone mentions the "art" in Statuary hall, and if the fine arts commission, which has been on the lips of congress lately because of the central power plant, the Grant memorial, the Lincoln memorial and other great things, could spend an afternoon in that hall the members would probably want to take quinine to rid themselves of the horrendous chills superinduced by gazing on the "art" therein.

The latest addition is the Senator Rice statue, a fine, upstanding effigy fashioned by Frederick E. Triebel, whose studio is at College Point, N. Y. It is one of the very few American members of the Royal Academy of Rome. He probably knows how to bring a marble block to life as well as the Greek who carved Galatea in yielding stone.

However, he seemed to have failed to live up to the realistic when it came to creasing Senator Rice's trousers. The latest criticism comes from Maj. James A. Abbott of Providence, R. I., a special employee of the United States senate, who was gazing upon the marble troopers a few days ago.

"The artist has given the senator creased trousers," said Major Abbott, "when, in fact, in the days that the senator lived, no one was ever seen in creases. If you had been found with your trousers creased like that, the natural supposition would have been that you had just picked up a pair of hand-me-downs in a ready-made shop (which was a disgrace in those days), and that you had not had time to iron out the creases made by piling the breeches one on top of the other on the shelf."

National Museum Shows Native Java Garments

ATTENTION has recently been called to the opportunities open to the style creator lying within the arts of certain quaint and little-known peoples. Especially is this applicable to the natives of parts of Java, who dress in homemade costumes of gayly printed cotton. Their method of dyeing or printing, and their designs and color schemes are both unique, and may well be imitated and applied to better goods for general trade, rather than the small distribution they receive at present.

The National museum has just received a consignment of these native garments obtained directly from the Netherlands East Indies commission at the close of the Panama-Pacific international exposition at San Francisco. The exhibit includes several different types of Javanese dress decorated by what is known as batik-work. The Javanese batik process is very crude, and yet is possibly the origin of the advanced method of resist printing followed today in various civilized countries. It is closely allied to the stencil method both in principle and effect.

The hand-made Javanese batiks are produced from common cotton sheeting, the only cloth procurable in their country.

Four main colors are used in this work: Indigo, red, a tannin brown, and a rather strong yellow. They are sometimes allowed to overlap, which results in the additional color effects of black, green, and orange. All the dyes are of home manufacture, made from native ingredients. The manufacture of the dyes takes considerable time also, and when it is considered that from one to three weeks is required to complete the application of each color of the three to be employed, and that each step of the process has to be repeated on the other side, it is seen what a long, tedious, and expensive process this native method is.

It is reported that a more advanced method has been tried successfully in Holland, where a similar system of coloring has been applied to pinches, skirts, and velvets. Strangely enough, the natives of Java seem unable to improve their methods even with European advice and assistance, and are unable to work more accurately or rapidly, and cannot be made to give any attention to symmetry or care.

White House No Place to Keep a Live Eagle

THE White House may be the fountain-head of American patriotism, but it is no place for a real live American eagle. President Wilson discovered this the other day, and for that reason the eagle is now preening its feathers in the aviary of the National Zoological park.

A mammoth eagle, containing a live bald-headed eagle from Colorado, reached the White House carrying with him the sense of the state of Colorado in behalf of preparedness.

The president appreciated the gift very highly. Nor did he express surprise. He looked over Mr. Eagle, and remarked in presidential language that it was "some bird."

But when it came to housing the bird the troubles of the White House staff began. But when the matter was presented in desperation to the president he decided that the eagle would be better off at the zoo.

The eagle was sent to the president by Judge George F. Patrick of Orono, Colo., who described it as the most magnificent eagle ever captured in that state.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. FRANK KNOB, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. Yost, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. C. E. V. V. Duzan, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

PLEASE note that in the Low Corn King the box is narrow—only 45 inches in width. The Low Corn King can be driven into a modern barn and loaded directly from the stable. That saves work.

The spread is eight feet or wider. That shortens the unloading time. The manure is thrown well beyond the wheels. That enables the driver to match up the edges of his strips without driving on manure-covered ground. You know what a big advantage that is.

The manure gets two thorough beatings. It lands on the ground in a finely-pulverized condition. The soil immediately takes up the fertilizing properties. There is no loss or waste of valuable fertilizing material.
